I didn't always know that I wanted to be an accountant. In high school, my passion was music and I started out college as a music education major. My third year in, I decided to be more practical and I switched my major to business. I took my first accounting class and I knew I had made the correct decision.

Being an accountant is the perfect balance of numbers, analytical thinking, and problem solving. Public accounting adds client relationships and daily variety. It has been the perfect career choice for me.

I have a few favorite things that I love about what I do. First, it is the perfect balance of having routine tasks and using a core skill set on a daily basis and but also there's a ton of variety because of the variety of clients we work with. I love the client relationships that we build and I love the relationships that we have within SVA. We use a teamwork approach and one of our core fundamentals is that we keep things fun.

My greatest accomplishment in my career is that it has all been in public accounting. I have completed 25 plus busy seasons, that is 25 plus years of working with clients, developing my skill set in accounting and tax and becoming an effective problem solver. Those are skills that I bring to every client that I work with.
