Why did I decide to become ACPA? Well, I've always been good at coming up with creative solutions to solving problems, and I've always valued being in service to others.

My mom was an accountant, and I grew up watching her use that same skill set to help our family and friends and serve our community. Watching that, making the decision to pursue a career in ACPA was an easy choice.

My favorite part about the work that I do is the variety of real estate projects that I get to work on. Whether I'm providing development consulting, assurance or tax services to a client, I've found that every real estate project has at least one or two unique elements or challenges.

While collaborating with the client to work through those challenges and meet their goals, I always walk away learning something new. I really get excited anytime I have the opportunity to attend a grand opening for real estate project that we consulted on.

Knowing just how much work goes into making that project possible, and then seeing everything come together and the impact that building has on the community. Being able to celebrate that with the development team is a great feeling.
