I really enjoy getting to know clients. Each client has different needs and different personalities and I love taking what I learn in meetings with clients and using that to develop a final product that they can use when making business and personal decisions.

I am very flexible when it comes to the way I work with clients. Ideally, I would like to meet with them in person first to gain a good understanding of their needs and goals. But after that I really cater towards my clients' preferences, whether that be with future in-person meetings, via phone or email.

My clients tell me I'm a great resource. They come to me with tax and accounting-related questions but also general business questions.

My proudest accomplishment is being able to maintain a comfortable work-life balance. I am able to complete client work in a timely and efficient manner and because of that, I can spend a lot of time with my family. I'm really proud to be able to show my daughter that you can maintain a successful career while being an involved parent.
