

Paul Sheahan Video Bio

I decided to become a CPA because I had a degree in accounting and I worked in the industry as a controller for about ten years right after college. And becoming a CPA allowed me to work with more of a variety of businesses and different types of clients.

The favorite part of the work that I do is being able to help my clients and help their businesses and give them ideas on how to be more profitable.

What I bring to my profession that others may not is that I'm also a certified fraud examiner. So I can do fraud examinations and internal control studies to help clients prevent fraud or detect fraud within their companies.
