One of the unique things that I bring to the profession is the fact that before coming to SVA, I worked in hotel management. That's a very customer service driven industry, so I was able to bring my customer service skills and combine them with my accounting skills, and it really helped me serve our clients.

I'm very proud of the fact that about four years ago, for some reason, my wife and I started running. And since then I've actually completed four marathons and I'm currently training for a fifth. Marathon running takes a lot of dedication, discipline, perseverance and I'm able to use that in helping clients to persevere and be disciplined in their business and help them achieve their goals.

I impact the client's business in several different ways. I help them to increase their revenues, I help them to run their business more efficiently, I help them to achieve greater profitability on the bottom line, and when I'm looking at their individual tax return, I help them to achieve lower taxable income by taking advantage of current tax law.
