The best part of my work is kind of twofold. I enjoy working with clients and helping them with their issues and situations. And I also enjoy developing staff to help them advance in their careers.

I like to work with my clients to assist them with the situations that they have as they come up with them. At points in time clients say, "I have a stupid question." My answer is there's no such thing. The stupid question is the one not answered, so what is the issue? How can we help? How can we work through situations to make sure that you are getting the best information to make a decision that works for the executive team and others at the company?

I like working with my clients in a way that helps them solve situations and problems. Looking outside the box, finding solutions for the issues that they may have, collaborating with their team, and in the end making sure that we have a good answer or result for what they are looking for.
